

Los Angeles Rams Sebastian Joseph-Day Donates $10,000 To Feed Cedars-Sinai Front Line Medical Personnel In Partnership with Rossoblu

Thursday, April 16, 2020 - In support of local medical personnel and their COVID-19 relief efforts, Los Angeles Rams defensive lineman Sebastian Joseph-Day recently donated $10,000 to Rossoblu's Restaurant Relief to fund 250 prepared meals for Cedars-Sinai front line medical personnel and their families.

"There's so many healthcare workers and medical specialists that are putting their lives on the line to help contain this pandemic," said Joseph-Day. "I wanted to try and provide at least some relief to those that are risking their lives to help fight the coronavirus."

Cedars-Sinai doctors, nurses and other health care heroes will each receive meal kits with braised short ribs, vegetables, soup, salad, and chocolate chip cookies to take home after their shifts.

"As we continue to confront this pandemic, we know that we are not alone because our community and the Los Angeles Rams are standing with us," said Arthur Ochoa, Chief Advancement Officer, Cedars-Sinai. "Together we will manage this challenge and become stronger than ever before."

Meal kits were prepared by Rossoblu Chef Steve Samson and delivered to Cedars-Sinai on Thursday afternoon.

"Thanks to Sebastian Joseph Day's remarkable generosity, we were able to provide a comforting meal to the front-line workers at Cedars-Sinai, who are working so hard to protect and care for our city," said Samson.
